NEW YEAR'S.

The closing hours of the old year are fast passing away, and before we again meet our readers, the year eighteen hundred and eighty-two will have been numbered with the past. At this season of the year, the most careless and unthinking will pause for a moment and take a retrospect of the past, and form new resolves for the future. The year that is now closing, like its predecessors, has brought sorrow and disappointment to many, who entered upon it with bright hopes of happiness and success. Whilst to others, it has been a year of continued prosperity in business, and of domestic happiness. And so it ever will be, in the ever changing vicissitudes of human life. It befalls us then to enjoy and improve the present, leaving the future to the Great Omnipotent, who ruleth all things well. It is indeed a wise provision that the gift of prescience is withheld from humanity. How miserable would our lives be if it were otherwise. If we could anticipate as it were the evils that are to befall us, and which we could not prevent, how wretched would be our every-day life, no enjoyment of the present, nothing but the ever present fear of evil to come, which would render our lives unendurable, and make us long for death to terminate our misery. Yes, it is best that the veil of obscurity should hide the future from our view, so that we can (if only for a brief space) enjoy the pleasures of our present existence whilst we can, trusting to Providence to care for the future.

The year 1882 has been marked by the success of British arms in Egypt, where the rebellion led by Arabi Pasha has been crushed by the English troops, under Sir Garnet (now Lord) Wolsey, well known in Canada, as the leader of the Red River Expedition, and who since then has added many fresh laurels to his brow. There is always a dark side to every picture, and the joy of victory, is saddened by the thought, (that although the loss of life on our side was remarkably small yet there will be many a once happy home in old England, which will mourn the absence of some dear one, whose life blood has been poured out on the sands of Egypt.

In our own Dominion, no event of national importance, has occurred. Peace and plenty reign within our borders, and the labors of the husbandmen have been crowned with abundant success. No intestine strife, or fear of foreign invasion has disturbed the harmony of our people, who have thus been enabled to devote their energies to the development of this great country, and the advancement of their own individual fortunes. One of the most remarkable events in our own history is the unexampled rapidity with which the Canadian Pacific Railroad is being built. The road has been pushed forward at the rate of four miles a day, a feat unparalleled in railroad engineering, and has now reached a point nearly six hundred miles west of Winnipeg. Emigrants have poured in by thousands during the year to settle the fertile lands of the great North West, and no doubt during the new year, now about to be born, their number will be largely increased during the coming year, when greater building facilities will be afforded.

And our prospects for the New Year, are brighter still with the certainty of two (if not more) railroads being commenced (one of which is said to be finished by the autumn) a line of telegraph connecting with the eastern Provinces, and a weekly mail established, the future of Prince Albert is assured. Full of hope then, and faith in a glorious future for our North West, and Prince Albert always first, we wish our readers and patrons, one and all, a happy and prosperous New Year.

EMMANUEL COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of this college took place on Saturday, when prizes were distributed as follows: Latin and Greek prize: Robt. M. McLean; Caesar (special): Hume B. McLean; Geography, British History and Roman History first prize, J. J. Spence; Arithmetic—senior division, Henry McKay; Arithmetic—junior division, Richard Isbister; Composition—junior division, Edmund Taylor; Geography—junior division, Louis Alesanck; English Grammar—junior division, Hume McLean; Spelling—Louis Alesanck; Writing—senior division, Donald McDonald; Writing—junior division, Joseph Sasakamoo.

The Louis Scholarship, for proficiency in Greek, Latin, Mathematics, Arithmetic and English Composition was adjudged to Donald McDonald, of Cumberland.

This scholarship was founded by several prominent residents of Prince Albert, in honor of H. B. H. the Prince of Wales, on the occasion of the visit of His Excellency the Governor General, last summer. The sum of $500 was subscribed and has been invested, the interest of which is paid to the successful competitor for one year.

There are twenty-six boys and students attending the college, including ten boarders, the rest are day scholars. Amongst the missionary students are three Cree, one Ojibwayan, and a Sioux student is daily expected. The work of the college is two-fold in its character. There is first a Theological department for the training of native students and missionary schoolmasters for the various mission throughout the diocese, this includes instruction in the grammatical construction and syntax of two of the Indian languages of the North West, Cree and Sioux. A tutor in the Blackfoot language will also be added. This effort to teach the aboriginal languages is unique in the history of educational institutions of the continent. There is also a collegiate school for educating boys and students in the usual branches of education. This department is open to all denominations.

The officers of the college are as follows:—the Right Rev. Bishop McLean (now absent in England, endeavoring to raise an endowment fund for the college) Warden and Professor of Theology: Rev. Canon MacLean, Sub-warden, tutor in English and Mathematics, assistant Professor of Theology, and tutor in Cree; the Rev. Canon Flett, B.D., Classical master, tutor in Sioux and Professor of Ecclesiastical History; Mr. A. A. Hutton, assistant tutor in English and Classics; Mr. A. H. Wright, assistant tutor in English. The Xmas vacation will last a fortnight, and the college will re-open on the second Monday in January.

STEWART &amp; WOOTTON

PATRICIA KEMBALL.

A NOVEL.

By E. Lynn Einton, author of "Little Lotion of Glycerine," "The Year History of Joshua Davidson," etc.

NOV. 17th.

Patricia read this letter as if it had referred to another life. Her vague discontent at the idea of the lady companion seemed so childish now in the face of the terrible reality that had come, and so far off. It seemed as if it was months ago, and at the other side of a wide river, when her uncle had called her into the porch to listen to the project over which he had been brooding, and which started her so much. It was only three days since, but a lifetime lay between. Three days ago she was a happy child, it was like a sorrowful woman. It was like waking up from a sorrowful dream; or rather it was like a dream itself—as if that happy past was the reality still, and this dreadful present a mere vision, a nightmare, from which she would awake in the morning to hear her uncle knocking up the house as usual—his kind old face, framed in his silver hair, beaming with affection, and freshened with the morning air, looking to the window from the lawn as he called out, "Hi, there, layabouts! Past six o'clock, and you still abed! Turn up, turn up, or I'll be at you!"

But, ah! it was all too real! He was dead; Gordon was away; there was no return, no escape to the beloved past; she had to realize the present, and to live through it.

Fortunately for her she had no one at this moment on whom she could fall back. She was the sole mistress of all that was left, and she must exert herself. Men may die, but men must live; and those who are left must be provided for on the day when the beloved he dead all the same as on other days. The morning breaks and the evening wanes, and there is the rising and the down-sitting, as if no light had gone out, and no one's life was the poorer for its loss. But a short time can be spared from active work for the filling in of a grave, let who will lie there. To the young this is impious and horrible; but it must be. Patricia would rather have sat in sackcloth and ashes by the side of the dear dead who have worn her ordinary gown than that very skirt which she had mended in the sunshine on the other side of the veil, and to many young people it is a task and a trial, and giving oneself up to mute mourning on the floor does not square with the ordinary run of things in daily life, and she had to bestir herself; to enter into communications with Miss Pritchard and Mother Jose, the one about her mourning, the other about the undertaker at Penrose, to whom word must be sent—tomorrow being Mother Jose's "day in." And when she had read Aunt Hanley's letter, she had to write to Alice by the train. Then of the loss that had befallen her. The chances are that without this letter as a reminder she would have forgotten her aunt's existence for the first part, and would then have shrunk from ringing herself before her notice for the second.

The answer came by telegram. Mother Jose brought it to save the expense of the messenger; and before Patricia had read it herself, all Parsons knew of it and half the village had spelled it over. It was short but important:

"Mr. Hanley sets off to-day for Parsons. He will bring you back with him."

Mrs. Hanley's. Not only for the beloved dead, but also for her. Through the gate of his grave she walked straight from the old tones, from the known to the unknown, from a young security to doubt and dread. Life at Aunt Hanley's! She shivered! How thought how cold the night was, and how soon the winter had come this year! But she was not going to mope and give way for a fancy, she thought. She was not of the kind to create spectacles for want of a braver resolve to meet cheerfully what was before her. The worst, Aunt Hanley was her father's sister and her dear dead uncle's, and with two such men for her helpers, she could not be all bad. And then the natural buoyancy of youth came in to help her. She had known only love and liberty hitherto, and may be loved from the forbidden glances of Alfay Holme. And, if not, what was the good of her promise to bear all things cheerfully? If her strength could not stand a trial, it was easy to be brave in the air, better to prove by deeds and be proved by trial! With this she dismissed herself and retired from her mind. And if she had thought of either, it had been rather in reference to being and doing as her beloved uncle would have wished, not because she cared much at this moment what would or would not become of her.

The next day, just as the evening was beginning to draw in, a post-chaise dashed through the village. It was the married couple to be had in Penrose, with a couple of postillions in rather shabby jackets; but it was a sight not often seen in Parsons, and it brought the people out as if the Queen or Womb-wallah would have been passing through. After stopping at the Lane Lodge to enquire where Holdfast Cottage might be found, and being told by a dozen people at once, the light-dressed, dark-haired man who had put his head out of the window to ask, said, "Drive on!" authoritatively, and drew it back again, smiling to himself, while the carriage dashed on to the cottage, followed by all the children of the place yelling their joans in west-country language and with scolding lungs.

Patricia was upstairs in a back room, and neither saw nor heard the arrival; but the servant came rushing in to summon her, breathless and jubilant. "Your aunt's master," she said. "And as fine a looking gentleman as ever you see!" she added excitedly, quite glad that her young mistress had such a shiny piece of humanity for her future protector.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Our columns will be open to correspondence upon any subject of general or local interest provided that the communications are brief, plainly written on one side of the paper, and are free from personalities of any kind, and are not couched in offensive language. We are convinced that the columns of the Times shall be free from anything that could offend the most fastidious reader, and to this rule we intend to adhere most strictly. All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, which of course will be strictly anonymous, otherwise they will be summarily consigned to the waste basket. We do not undertake to return rejected M.S.s.

OBITUARY.

To the Editor of the Times.]

SIR, Many of your readers will doubtless be sorry to learn that the poor Perce has gone to her long home and resting place, where it is to be hoped that she will meet with a kindlier reception, and her services be more appreciated than they were during her short sojourn amongst a peace loving and long suffering people. A stranger in a strange land, and of doubtful catching, she was but a poor fledgeling at that, and fluttered her gossip covered wings for a few days in the chilling blast of unappreciation, and then gathered up her pinions and took flight for a more congenial sphere, where she would be out of the reach of a literary murdering class of correspondents, who endeavored to feed the poor bird on wind pudding and stale gossip from the roosts of other defunct parrots. Much credit is however due the editor who it is said watched the poor bird with unrelenting attention, night and day, hoping that by good nursing and a more generous diet, she might be able to rub through the rigors of a northern winter. But it was not to be, and finally gathering up her remaining strength she took flight to the unknown world. The poor bird is now dead. Respectful in place.

MAGPIE.

BY FLOOD AND FIELD.

To the Editor of the Times.]

SIR, I observe in your last issue a communication signed "A Bonus Subscriber," (would not "bonus" be nearer the mark?) in which he endeavors to exercise his small wit at my expense, over a few letters, which (partly for my own amusement, certainly not to instruct such a great traveller and learned historian, as your correspondent), I ventured to publish in your paper, describing some incidents of my journey from Winnipeg to Prince Albert. He kindly suggests, that as an Historical Society is shortly to be formed here, that a full account of my travels be written on parchment and filed away in the archives of the society. As the lamented Artemus Ward would say, it is unnecessary to add, this is SARASIM. You will permit me to make another suggestion, and that is, that a grammarian society, or school for instruction in the English language, be established in Prince Albert, and then after a few lessons, perhaps your correspondent would not shock the ghost of Lindley Murray, with such elegant and scholarly sentences, as the following, "He (my humble self) has at last finished his wanderings, melancholy, slow," leaving one somewhat in doubt as to whether the "he" or the "wanderings" were "melancholy, slow." The charming ease with which your correspondent changes his individuality from the personal pronoun "I" to the editorial "we," is another peculiarity of his style, which all editors can claim the merit of originality. But I shall not take up any more of your space, further than to say that I have reason to know, that if the final suggestion of your "Bonus Subscriber" that my letters (representing as they were) be reprinted in supplement form be carried out, they would find a reader sale than any productions from his cynical pen.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE

OTTAWA, 14th July, 1881.

PRINCE ALBERT.

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

On the recommendation of the Honorable the Acting Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, and under the provisions of the first section of the Act passed in the session of the Parliament of Canada held in the 14th year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter seven, and entitled "An Act to amend the Indian Act, 1880."

His Excellency, by and with the consent of the Senate of Canada, has been pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the following regulations be, and the same are hereby made and adopted:

"No land or irregular band of Indians, and no band of Indians, or any part of such reserve, or any such reserve, shall be liable to be seized and taken possession of by any person acting in or for the authority, either general or special, of the Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, and to be dealt with as the Superintendent-General, or any officer or person thereto by him authorized may direct."

J. O. COTE, Clerk, Privy Council.

By forty-four Victoria, chapter seventeen, being "An Act to amend the Indian Act 1880, sections two and three, it is provided that:

"2. Any person who buys or otherwise acquires from any such Indian, or band, or irregular band of Indians, or any part of such reserve, or any such reserve, made by the provision or regulations made by the Governor in Council under this Act, is guilty of a felony, and is liable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months in any place of confinement other than a penitentiary, or by both fine and imprisonment."

If any such crops or produce, or other produce as aforesaid, be unlawfully in the possession of any person, within the intent and meaning of this Act and of any provisions or regulations made by the Governor in Council under this Act, any person acting under the authority, either general or special, of the Superintendent-General, may, with right, seize and take possession of the same, and he shall do so, with the Superintendent-General, or any officer or person thereto by him authorized, may direct."

BATTLEFORD ITEMS.

The Rev. T. Clarke, missionary of the Church of England, at Battleford, who is paying a short visit to the town, reports things as being in a flourishing condition at Battleford. During his five years residence at the Capital, he has had an excellent opportunity of seeing the development and progress of the country.

There are quite a number of first-class farmers in the vicinity, all of whom express themselves much pleased both with the country and the climate. The crops, last summer, were admirably good, and the settlers were abundantly rewarded for all their toil and expense.

The excellent land in this district, and the natural advantages of the country cannot but induce many who are anxious to procure homes in the North West to avail themselves of this glorious opening.

Six Indian reserves have been located and surveyed in the neighborhood. These are inhabited by the Cree and Stony Indians, who are cultivating their farms extensively and have made for themselves comfortable homes, through the liberality of the Dominion Government, which assists them in every way.

As an instance of the progress they are making in farming pursuits, we may mention that one of them at Eagle Hills, has raised this summer 630 bushels of grain, and about 200 bushels of potatoes. There are about 450 of the latter, and 800 Crows. Schools have been established on three of the aforesaid reserves, under the auspices of the Church Missionary Society of England. The native children exhibit a great aptitude for acquiring knowledge, and it is gratifying to see the wonderful progress they have made in the various subjects taught them. Mr. Clarke superintends the schools, visits the reserves alternately on Sundays, and conducts an English service in Battleford every Sunday evening. He has been greatly encouraged in the work, by the success which has attended his humble efforts to disseminate the glorious gospel amongst the aboriginal tribes. Although a noble work has been achieved by the Church, yet the majority of the Indians are still heathen, and much still remains to be done.

A steam saw mill is in course of erection on Turtle River, about twelve miles from Battleford, and a grist mill will also probably be built during the next summer.

GOOD WORDS.

We cut the following from a late number of the Winnipeg Commercial: "There are few if any inland towns in Canada, where such enterprise has been shown as in Prince Albert, and this is all the more marked on account of the limited means of communication, which its people have with the centres of trade. It can only be reached by steamboat, during two, or at most three months in the spring and early summer, and at all other times, teaming or travel by York boat is the only means of transportation or communication. Nevertheless quite a fine town exists there, and a prosperous colony around it. At present a mail reaches there only once in three weeks and the business of the town naturally suffers thereby. The cause of this surprising town, and old settlement around it, for a weekly mail should be urged at Ottawa. No doubt the expense of conveying the same would be considerable, as it entails five days of a drive, each trip. Still the efforts of the people to build up a town should be encouraged by the post office department at the Canadian capital, and it is to be hoped that some of our Manitoba members of Parliament will lend their aid and influence in the matter."

We are obliged to our contemporary for his kind wishes for our prosperity, and trust the post office authorities will recognize the right of the people of Prince Albert to a weekly mail and telegraphic communication with the rest of the Dominion.

TRUE WIT.

True wit looks like the Indian stone, brought from the Indian mine; Which leaves two different powers in it, To cut as well as shine. Gentle like that if polished right, With the same gifts abounds; Appears at once both true and bright, And sparkles while it wounds.

TOWN NEWS.

Mr. Robt. Bish left yesterday morning for the South Branch.

The English Church is beautifully decorated for the Xmas Holidays.

High mass was celebrated by Father Andre, on Xmas Eve, to a large congregation.

The Rev. Canon McKay, will hold a midnight watch meeting, at 11 o'clock, on New Year's Eve, in the English Church.

The Rev. Mr. Slawright will hold a midnight watch service, in the Presbyterian Church, New Year's Eve, at 11 o'clock.

The skating rink was crowded throughout the whole of Xmas Day. The weather was beautiful and the skaters seemed to enjoy the invigorating exercise.

There will be a midnight service in the Methodist Church, on New Year's Eve, at 11 o'clock. On New Year's night an entertainment will take place in the same Church.

We understand an Irish wake took place the other night, small pieces of the corpse were taken away by the excited guests. Speeches were indulged in, and the party broke up at an early hour.

Several Ptarmigan, or white geese, as they are called in the north of Scotland, have been recently shot in this neighborhood. They are but rarely found in this district, although plentiful further to the north, and their presence here is an indication of a severe winter.

Advice have been received by Joseph Finlayson, clerk of the Court, from Judge Richardson, stating that he intended to leave Pattullo for Prince Albert on the 28th inst. and will hold a Court here on Wednesday, the 3rd of January. The Court will be held in the large room over Walters & Baker's store.

We notice a fine new Canadian flag floating from the flag staff, on the roof of J. O. Davis & Co's store. The flag was made to order in Winnipeg, and contains the Canadian coat of arms, and the name of the firm in one corner. It presents quite a gay appearance and sets off the new building of the enterprising proprietors to great advantage.

The Xmas Tree, which took place in the Presbyterian Church, Monday night was great success, over $50 was taken at the door. A large number of people were unable to gain admission. The entertainment consisted of recitations, readings, singing and instrumental music. The singing of Mrs. H. E. Hurd, Miss Hurd, Mr. H. E. Hurd, and Mr. Wm. Johnston, was a great treat to the audience. Mr. Slawright acted as chairman. Mr. Thos. Powers, made a capital Santa Claus, and distributed the presents to the children. Miss Dilorah received a very valuable present, an slight acknowledgment for her services as organist. Miss Baker also received a very hand, some present.
